Blue Ribbon Meetings.

Detroit now has the most modern racing plant in the middle west. By spending $20,000 on improvements the Detroit Driving Club has made a model course of the state fair grounds where the Blue Ribbon meetings of the future will be held. As usual Detroit opens the grand circuit, and the racing this year will take place from July 27 to 31 inclusive.

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' and Chamber of Commerce stakes, the most famous of the light harness turf, will be among the features. These events this year promise to be even more spirited contests than have the renewals in the past. In addition there are stakes for 2:11 trotters and 2:07 pacers, the first named of which has attracted the most sensational field of developed trotters that ever have scored for the world.

During the five afternoons there will be fifteen events which will be participated in by Geers, McCarthy, Macey, Snow, Benyon, Andrews, McHenry, De Ryder, Dean, McMahon, Murphy, Cox, Renick, McDonald, and the most famous reinsmen on the continent. It will be a blue ribbon meeting in every sense of the word.

A Building for Boys.

After four years of careful experimentation, the State Committee has this summer erected a permanent building on the site of the State Camp for boys.

The building is 21x45, one story, with a high basement, built of concrete and cement blocks with galvanized roof and tin shutters for all windows and doors. It is thus built to endure for many generations of Michigan Boys. A concrete dock 40x45 with cement top makes a substantial finish to the lake front. The basement, ten feet high, with cement floor, a fire place and seven large windows will make an excellent workshop and place for manual training, etc., in the summer and a safe winter storage for the fine fleet of boats which is being steadily acquired.

From the dock, cement stairways ascend at each end of the building to the level of the camping ground from which entrance is made to the first floor of the building. The first floor room, like the basement, is one large room, with fourteen windows facing the lake and a large fire-place in the rear. This fire-place will take in a log five feet long and is destined to remain long and lovingly in the memory of many of Michigan's future leading citizens. Stones for it were gathered by the willing hands of more than one 1907 camper.

In the bay window of the first floor room will be located the camp office, and from this place the camp leader will have an immediate view of the entire swimming and boating area used by the campers, and command the entrance to the grounds and most of the sleeping tents.

The reading room, library and writing tables of the camp will be in one end of this first floor room whose ample height also makes it excellent for gymnastic apparatus, if desired. When boys go out to camp, they do not want to be shut up indoors nor will they be at Hayo-Went-Ha. All of the wisdom that one can wish for is still there, but this building will, in addition to being a safe place for the storage of the camp equipment, make also a place of refuge on those cold rainy days that we must all plan for occasionally in Michigan summers.

In plain view from the lower end of the lake, fourteen miles away, the building makes a beautiful picture with its summer background of green forest and glimpses of the campers' tents. A nearer view and closer inspection reveal the strong, courageous and unselfish living which the campers realize is the true spirit of Hayo-Went-Ha.

Besides this building, the State Committee also owns fifty-five acres of land having 104 rods of lake front and a good field for athletics. This makes a permanent equipment with which many things can be done for the Boys of the State.

That the camp will be open longer each year and facilities for tutoring under College men added, is within the range of present plans while the use which may be made of it as a winter camp remains to be seen.

Secretary Sidenius has been appointed one of the leaders and will take a group of boys to Torch Lake for two weeks, July 15-29. For information call at Y. M. C. A.

Grape "Black Rot."

During the last three or four years the seasons have been very favorable for the development of the disease known as "Black Rot" of the grape and in some sections the losses from this and other fungous diseases have been very serious.

While the climatic conditions have much to do with its development, which is very rapid during warm, muggy weather in July and August, what is called "Black Rot" is really caused by the growth within the fruit and foliage of a microscopic fungus, which develops from spores, a form of seed, for whose germination the presence of moisture on the grapes or leaves is required. A certain degree of heat is also necessary and the development will be more rapid if it is seventy degrees or more.

When the conditions are in any way favorable, there is always danger of serious, if not entire, loss of the crop in sections where the disease has prevailed even to a slight extent, as it has wonderful reproductive powers. Fortunately, however, the spores are very delicate and are readily destroyed. Among the most effective remedies are various salts of copper and in actual practice it has been found that if the vines are kept covered with a compound of lime and copper sulphate commonly known as Bordeaux mixture, the spores will be destroyed and there will be no chance of loss from this disease. To be effective, the treatment must be begun before the grapes have been attacked, as, once inside, the spread cannot be checked. For this reason also, it is very important that the treatment be so thorough as to reach every part of every grape and leaf.

After the vines are in full foliage, it is no easy matter to do this; hence, care must be taken to avoid a rank growth of the vines, and the pruning in the spring should be as thorough as possible without reducing their productive capacity. It is also necessary to have the vines well spread out on the trellises and if the leaves become so thick as to make thorough spraying difficult or impossible, some of the leaves or surplus shoots can be removed, or the latter can be tied back so that the spray can reach the grapes. Care should also be taken when pruning that all rotten grapes be removed.

Number and Dates of Application.

Owing to the variations in seasons and the extent to which this disease prevails, no definite rule regarding the dates when grapes should be sprayed can be given. If the spray is washed off by rains, it should be replaced at once and if the conditions during the latter part of July and early August favor the development of the disease, it will often pay to give two or three more sprayings than when it is dry and there is little rot.

The first application should be made just before the buds open and should not only thoroughly soak the vines but the trellises should also be sprayed. For this treatment it will be well to use a copper sulphate solution of two pounds in fifty gallons of water.

After the growth has started and before the blossoms have opened the first spraying of Bordeaux mixture should be made. This should be repeated when the fruit has set and is the size of small peas. Especially if the season is favorable to the development of the disease, the sprayings should be repeated every ten days until the fruit begins to show color. In case the disease is not very troublesome upon unsprayed vineyards, a somewhat longer interval would answer, but four or five applications after the fruit has set can generally be made with profit in sections where the disease is working.

For the first application of Bordeaux mixture it will be well to use four pounds of copper sulphate and six pounds of lime in fifty gallons of water, but for later sprayings the amounts can be reduced to three and five pounds respectively. If necessary to spray after the fruit has begun to color, the amounts should be reduced to two pounds copper sulphate and two of lime in fifty gallons.

Another remedy that can be used to advantage when the grapes are ripening is known as "Soda Bordeaux." It is prepared by dissolving three pounds of copper sulphate and one pound of concentrated lye and slaking five ounces of lime, using two gallons of hot water for each. Mix the lime and copper sulphate solution and after adding the lye solution, dilute to fifty gallons.

While an ordinary barrel pump can be used for spraying small vineyards by arranging three or four nozzles on each side, it will be more satisfactory, if much spraying is to be done, to use a special vineyard spraying outfit, of which there are various kinds on the market.

With a suitable equipment it is possible to spray an acre of grapes for from eighty cents to one dollar per application, or at a total cost for labor and material of four to seven dollars, according to the number of applications, for the season.

Every vineyard in which the rot has appeared should be sprayed as it may save from five to twenty times the cost, especially as the treatment is equally effective against the mildews of the grape, which are often quite troublesome.

A bulletin giving complete directions for spraying for this and other diseases can be obtained by applying to L. R. Taft, Agricultural College, East Lansing, Michigan.

Tiger Versus Lion.

The Bengal tiger has more courage than the lion—so, at least, we are assured by a showman, who states that the matter was tested in this manner: "We placed a shooting cracker in the respective cages and fired the fuses. As soon as the fuses began to burn they attracted the attention of both animals, but in a widely different manner. The lion drew into a corner and watched the proceedings with a distrustful and uneasy eye. The tiger, on the contrary, advanced to the burning fuse with a firm step and undiminished gaze. On reaching the cracker he took his paw and began to roll it over the floor, and when it exploded beneath his very nose he did not flinch, but continued his examination until perfectly satisfied. The lion betrayed great fear when he heard the report of the explosion and for quite a time would not be coaxed out of his den."

CANT DENY IT

If This Had Happened in San Francisco Instead of Owosso, More Than One Reader Might Doubt It.

The average man is a doubter. This is not surprising—the public have been dumfounded so frequently they are skeptical. Proof like the following will stand investigation. It cannot be disputed.

George F. Evans, formerly living at 312 Grover street, Owosso, Mich., says: "In my work in the past I have done much heavy labor and have been exposed to the weather which has served to bring on my kidney trouble. My back aches a great deal and at times sharp pains would extend to my shoulders. My kidneys were much disordered, the secretions being very frequent and they forced me to rise often during the night and greatly disturb my rest. A friend of mine learned of my trouble and advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I felt relieved from the first, and continued taking them until I had used the contents of two boxes, when I was cured."

The Star Chamber.

The old tribunal which figures so extensively in the history of Charles I. as the "star chamber" is said to have received the name from the fact that the roof of the apartment in which the tribunal sat was decorated with gilt stars. Another explanation is that it took its name from the "starres," or Jewish bonds, which at one time had been kept in it.

Would Go Elsewhere.

Little Ruth had been quietly listening to her mother's description of heaven as she patted her big doll's golden head and affectionately pressed it to her breast, says Lippincott's Magazine. Suddenly she turned to her mother and said, "Mother, can dolls go to heaven?" "No, Ruth," her mother replied. "Heaven is for people, not for dolls." "Would I have to leave dolly here if I went to heaven?" asked Ruth. "I'm afraid you would, Ruth." "Well, then, mother," said Ruth seriously, "when they come for me I'll be very polite and say, 'No, thanks, Mr. Angel, as they'll take dolly and my rockin' chair an' go an' sit by th' fire.'"
